GAZA CITY, GAZA STRIP—ISRAELI WAR planes pounded the homes of Hamas leaders and ground troops edged closer to the Gaza Strip's densely populated urban center on Monday ahead of a key decision on whether to escalate its devastating two-week offensive.

From downtown Gaza City, black smoke could be seen rising over the eastern suburbs, where the two sides skirmished throughout the night.

At least six Palestinian were killed in the attacks.

5 DOJ officials take leave

Gonzalez, Zuño say PDEA execs must also go on furlough

By Norman Bordadora

JUSTICE SECRETARY RAUL GONZALEZ yesterday placed two ranking department officials and three prosecutors on indefinite leave to comply with President Macapagal-Arroyo's order that those involved in the "Nabang Boys" controversy go on leave.

Justice Undersecretary Ricardo Manalita, Chief Prosecutor Jeremio Zuño, Senior State Prosecutor Philip Kimpio, State Prosecutor Miguel Ladaga and Investigating Prosecutor John Rendo were considered on indefinite leave starting yesterday.

Gonzalez said Senior Assistant State Prosecutor Severino Gato would take on Zuño's tasks while the pending cases of the prosecutors on leave would be handled off to other prosecutors in the department.

Zuño upheld the resolution dismissing the drug charges against the "Nabang Boys"—Richard Brickett, Joseph

Ex-solon denies Palace links in Limkaichong case

By Christine V. Esguerra, Christine O. Avendaño and Gil C. Cabacungan Jr.

FORMER REP JACINTO SIBAS yesterday dismissed himself from Manila amid allegations that it was he who had his petition to the Supreme Court, a move reportedly intended to oust Chief Justice Reynato Puno.

Puno said he had not talked to President Macapagal-Arroyo and her husband or anybody connected to them about his petition seeking to disqualify Negrato Criminal Rep. Ardyn Limkaichong, as alleged by an Internet source from legal circles.

"That is a shame," Puno told the business, referring to allegations that the First Couple had been in touch with him to convince him that Puno's inaction on the disqualification of Limkaichong (who defeated Puno's wife Olivia in 2007) was sufficient grounds to impeach the Chief Justice.

He said he was not close to the President. "I haven't seen the shadow or heard the voice of the First Gentleman for so long. I don't even know how he looks like now," Puno said.

He stressed that the petition he filed in the high court was a "personal" matter for him and his wife, who were both seeking to oust Limkaichong over questions of citizenship.

Puno maintained that the issue was solely about Puno's purported failure to act on a draft decision against Limkaichong. He said the decision passed by Associate Justice Pedro Reyes was signed by 14 other justices and should have been adopted.

"Our case should be shelved from politics, too," Puno said, borrowing a line from Puno who appealed to politicians to spare the high court from partisan maneuvering.

Puno said there was "no link" to the allegation that his petition was

Bicolano WW II veteran fights another kind of war

By Juan Escudero Jr. Aquino Southern Cross

PARAQUE, CAMARINES NORTE—Zenaida V. Lamasol moved from Batangas where he fell to Japanese forces on April 9, 1942, during World War II. He walked far almost a month to find and joined the resistance forces until liberation in 1945.

Today, Lamasol is fighting another kind of war—a policy of Land Bank of the Philippines that he feels strikes and imprisons as age slowly creeps up on him.

The 95-year-old is no longer in good health. He has difficulty walking around in his house. Going to the Landbank branch in Labo 22 kilometers from his house to collect his monthly pension of P5,800 is extremely difficult for him.

Like some 400 surviving World War II veterans in Camarines Norte, Lamasol receives his pension from the Philippine Veterans Affairs Office (PVAO) located in Landbank.

Since he could barely walk, Lamasol received a special power of attorney (SPA) on Aug. 13, 2008, in favor of his wife Mercedes, 83, to trans-

Major countries struggle to cope with job losses

SYDNEY—AUSTRALIA'S JOBS MARKET SHOWED signs of cracking on Monday under the weight of the crumbling global economy and British Prime Minister Gordon Brown was set to pledge more help for the long-term unemployed.

US President-elect Barack Obama vowed to cut across a financial storm that is now more familiar than losing their homes, as politicians across the world grapple with the most serious effects of a long and deep recession.

Elite Daily from the United States on Friday showed more than half a million Americans lost their jobs in December, making 2008 the worst year for employment since World War II.

The Monday survey from Australia and New Zealand Banking Corp. showed the number of job advertisements in Australia dropped to non-seasonal levels in December.

Australia had lost one of its best developed economies to have seen its labor market in more relatively buoyant as the world's economic shock took hold in 2008.

The survey showed the first number of job advertisements to newspapers and on the Internet fell 8.7 percent in December from the month before, the eighth straight month of losses.

As well as the 28.9 percent drop from December last year and had fallen 22 percent since September, the sharpest three-month drop on record.

"While mostly it is suggesting us and suggests that the labor market could be in worse shape than economists expect," said Joshua Williamson, a senior economist at TD Securities.

cost, says James Neveland, chief, citing a person familiar with the data.

In South Korea, the Yonhap newspaper, citing a Bank of Korea official, reported that the economy contracted by more than 4 percent in the fourth quarter of 2007 from the third, a much deeper decline than a previous projection of 1.6 percent.

US doctors address harmful side effects of ICU stays

FOR YEARS, DOCTORS thought they had done their jobs if patients came out of an intensive care unit alive.

Now, though, researchers say they are alarmed by what they are finding as they track patients for months or years after an ICU stay. Patients, even young ones, can be weak for years. Some have difficulty thinking and concentrating or have gone on to develop more diseases and disabilities.

While patients may be following long-term effects from diseases that brought them to the ICU, researchers are increasingly concerned that spending days, weeks or months in the hospital in the unit can itself cause long-lasting effects.

In one case, ICU stay was so long that a patient's body was so weak that he could not walk. In another, a patient's body was so weak that he could not walk. In another, a patient's body was so weak that he could not walk.

Dr. David Asch, who runs the critical care clinical medicine and rehabilitation program at Johns Hopkins, says the amount of time in the unit is a key factor in how long it takes for patients to get back to work.

"We are asking ourselves, what can we do on Day 1 to get patients out of the unit and back to work sooner, without problems with weakness, mood and thinking?"

Sharks preying on Aussies

SYDNEY—A SERIES of savage shark attacks in Australia has sent a shiver through tourists holidaying on the beach.

Three attacks on swimmers within 24 hours over Sunday and Monday—just two weeks after a shark killed a child—have led to a sharp decline in the number of tourists visiting the beach.

Do you need lifestyle coaching?

By Mark Felipe
Consultant

IT'S DIFFICULT TO RETURN TO AN ACTIVE lifestyle and well-controlled eating right after the holidays due to the following:

- Prohibition magnification. The threat of starving from scratch because you feel that you've gained all the weight you lost. But in reality, you gained just a pound or two.
- Impatience. You feel it'd be a very long process as you return to a quick fix strategy.
- Distraction. You focus on the negative. How you ate fat and happened when it comes to illness, weight and health improvements.
- Laziness. No healthy habits or activities. Can't be any exercising help you deal with Lifestyle coaching goes beyond exercise training and nutrition counseling. A lifestyle coach trained and experienced in nutritional science, exercise science and behavioral science focuses on modifying our behavioral risk factors like smoking, high dietary cholesterol, alcohol abuse and drinking which are leading causes of death.

A lifestyle coach uses evidence-based principles during coaching sessions by:

- Encouraging diet thinking, teaching you how to modify your own diet and food at home.

- Educating you about the importance of being active and eating healthy, helping you set short- and long-term realistic and manageable goals like losing weight
- Helping to identify personal barriers
